1 — Introduction

1.1 The Numbers Bankability Index

The Numbers Bankability Index estimates how much someone adds in value to the film industry each year based on analysis of the Hollywood Creative GraphTM, a network of over 65,000 people with over 2.5 million connections that represent all the films they have worked on together. By using an analytical technique called graph analysis, the Bankability Index measures the influence of each person in the Hollywood Creative Graph. By using different metrics of a film's performance, and filtering the connections that appear in the graph, we can assess the influence someone has on different aspects of the industry.

For example, our flagship index, the Worldwide Index, which appears on The Numbers web site, uses worldwide box office for each film to assess the value of connections between two people, and therefore who has the greatest influence over global box office results. This is the broadest measure we use, and gives the most general picture of who is driving film industry revenues today. In simple terms, if the film business returned to the studio system that existed in the 1950s, this is how much we would pay everyone each year. This document contains the index for the current top 250 people in the industry by that measure.

By dividing the annual value of a person by the number of movies they make each year, we create the Value per Movie Index. This measures how much value, on average, someone brings to the movies they work on. It might be tempting to suppose that this is how much someone should be paid for appearing in a movie. However, note that this is the average, and someone who appears in a mix of films will naturally bring their average down for every small indie film they make, and increase their average by appearing in a studio tentpole. So, for example, Johnny Depp's average of $9.3 million reflects the diversity of roles he takes, not what he should get paid for playing Captain Jack Sparrow in a Pirates of the Caribbean movie.

In this sample document, all names are replaced by Xxxxx Yyyyy. In all other respects, this report is identical to the report we provide.

2 — Indexes

The Top 250 Edition of The Numbers Bankability Index includes four indexes:

Worldwide Bankability Index

This measures the annual value created by the top 250 people in the industry, as measured by analyzing the Hollywood Creative Graph using the worldwide box office of each movie in our database.

Worldwide Value per Movie

This measures the average value created per movie by each of the top 250 people in the industry.

Domestic Bankability Index

This measures the annual value created by the top 250 people in the industry, using domestic box office instead of worldwide box office. People who are higher in this chart than in the Worldwide Bankability Index chart tend to have comparatively more appeal in the United States and Canada than overseas.

Domestic Value per Movie

This measures the domestic value created per movie, based on domestic box office receipts.

2.1 Worldwide Bankability Index Top 250, November 2013

The Worldwide Bankability Index is based on the worldwide box office earnings, and acting and technical credits, for films in The Numbers database. Everyone in the Hollywood Creative Graph is eligible for inclusion in this chart.

Table 2.1: Index created November 11, 2013. 65,609 people and 19,397 movies in database.

2.2 Worldwide Value per Movie Index Top 250, November 2013

The Worldwide Value per Movie Index is based on the worldwide box office earnings, and acting and technical credits, for films in The Numbers database. To be eligible for this chart, someone needs to have credits in at least 5 movies in the past 10 years.

3 — Custom Reports

3.1 Further Analysis for Your Film Projects

The Numbers Bankability Index can be customized in an almost infinite variety of ways to produce reports specific for a particular film project. For example, we can provide an analysis of the technical people who have the most success in a particular budget range, the "hot" actors and actresses who have been driving domestic box office results over the past 3 years, or screenwriters who specialize in a particular genre. The list is virtually limitless, and we'll be happy to discuss the specifics of your project and see how we can help.
